

user;

(c) transparently transmit the license file to the user;

(d) subsequent to steps (a), (b), and (c), compare the one or more parameters contained in the license file to the corresponding one or more parameters maintained by the provider system to determine whether or not the user is allowed access to the content; and

(e) transparently renew the parameters in the license file if the parameters in the license file differ from the corresponding parameters maintained by the provider system to allow continued access to the content by the user in accordance with the license file parameters maintained by the provider system.

REMARKS

Entry of these amendments, prior to examination, is respectfully requested.

A marked-up version of the claims, which indicates all amendments made, is submitted herewith.

None of the amendments introduce new matter.

An early and favorable examination is earnestly solicited.
